The Hon. Edward Everages asys:

"It does the author equal credit as a man of science, and an energetic, shifted and courageous adventurer, and a true hearted philauthrepist. I conjunction with his former publications, it will secure him an abiding place on the rolls of henest fame among the herces of humanity. The style of typography and illustration is of superior excellence."

W. H. PRESCOTT, the Historian says:

"It is one of the most remarkable records I have ever met with, of difficulties and sufferings, and of the power of a brave spirit to vercome them."

WM. C. BRVANT, the Poet, sajs:
"The merits of Dr. Kane's recent work are so universally acknowledged, that it seems superfluous to praise it."

The Rev. Francis L. Hawks, LL. D., says:

"The world has in it few such stories of homen suffering and berote endurance as is presented in Dr. Kane's last work. The bock is one which needs not the world of approbation from any man; it carries with if: Its own recommendation; and I should feel that in me it would be but an act of impertuence should I pretend to indorse its needs. Dr. Kane and his book will, very properly, be remembered long after I am forgotten."

G. P. R. James, the Novelist, says:
"I reed the two volumes with deeper interest than I ever felt in any work in my life, and I concluded them with love and admiration for the man who wrote them. I only wish there were a dozen volumes more."

The Hon, GRORGE BANCROFT, the Historian, says:
"His expedition, in view of the small number of his party, the size of his verse! (which had not even one companion), the extent to which he explored the Polar regions, the length of time he remained there, and the marvels of his escape—seems to me without a parallel." Major-Gen. Winstell Scott says:

"I have read Dr. Kaue's Arctic Explorations (only since his death) with the most poignant interest. So many noble adventures in the cause of homanity—so many heathless escapes from imminent destruction—so much schieved for science—and at too in spirited yet classical English—which the young here and scholar, though in haste, had hardly committed to the immortal press when he sank into the grave, the victim of his own undying labors: " 2 vols., cotavo. style, and in many of its incidents, it is soaroety below. Tom Brown's School Days."

That the narratives are truthful, as the preface declares, is quality declared and enforced by the narratives themselves. They are beautiful, now-real nature—but yet nature depicted by the experienced and skillful hand. It would be vain to selected by the experienced and skillful hand. It would be vain to select the best places where all are so good—but if I might—and there is no touch a choice. I would say: "The Orchard," "The World foult a choice. I would say: "The Orchard," "Fourth of July," "Indian Corn," "Tank saying Day," and last, but not least. "Amateur Matracting," peaced one most. The last mentioned would stand beside Goldsmith's "Moses and his Spectacles." Just published by
